   - ICAHM co-sponsor with NASA of Society for American Archaeology symposium on use of aerial and satellite remote sensing in archaeology
What is ICAHM?

- The ICOMOS International Scientific Committee on Archaeological Heritage Management

- Ultimately, it will likely be the largest of the approximately 28 ICOMOS scientific committees, which deal with subjects from Stained Glass through Polar Heritage to Documentation of cultural resources
“ICOMOS expects the International Committees to be at the heart of scientific inquiry and exchange in their domains,” and, further, they should “… actively pursue programmes which define research needs, stimulate and support research activity, and increase exchange and dissemination in order to promote greater understanding in the field.”
ICOMOS Is Moving to Enhance to Role of Scientific Committees

- To enhance the evaluation of sites nominated to the World Heritage List
- To provide for a better distribution of sites around the world
- To provide for better monitoring of World Heritage Sites
- To develop more effective networks of professionals
- To develop publications of value to the purposes of ICOMOS

What ICAHM Has Been

- A President and Executive comprised of regional VPs and a Secretary

- Products
  - Desk audits and site visits to provide input for evaluation of nominations to the WHL
  - Statements to the press and resolutions to ICOMOS regarding specific issues affecting archaeological heritage management (most often about specific sites)
We Have Undertaken a Variety of Tasks at the Request of ICOMOS

- Review of Controversial Projects
  - Rosia Montana, Romania, destruction of Roman and pre-Roman sites by mining company
  - Zeugma, Turkey Dam Construction and flooding of mosaics
  - Akrotiri on Santorini, Greece, site shelter collapse
Tasks Undertaken at the Request of ICOMOS

- Developing a statement on the effect of climate change on archaeological sites
- Developing a Statement on Tourism and Heritage for UNESCO
- Providing and sometimes coordinating review of the Ename Charter on Interpretation
- Consideration of guidelines for ICAHM charter (supported by GCI)
ICAHM Advocating for Archaeological Resources

- Letter to Time in response to an article on collecting archaeological antiquities as an investment and resolution at the Quebec City General Assembly
- Circulating information and petitions regarding threats to archaeological heritage
  - Legalizing sale of ancient coins from Cyprus
  - Development of Nine Mile Canyon in Utah, site of extensive collection of rock art.
ICAHM Advocating for Archaeological Resources

ICAHM members have contributed many articles to Heritage at Risk (H@R)

- Independence National Historic Site (US) The Parliament Buildings in Upper Canada
- Early medieval stronghold at Napole in northern Poland
- The practice of rescue archeology on Japanese islands
ICAHM Advocating for Archaeological Resources

- New airport construction in Quito, Ecuador found to be adequately surveyed and mitigated
  - Confronting neo-Colonial sentiment in our own field?
ICAHM and National Committees

- Some examples from the revised US agenda:
  - Advocating for World Heritage Sites
    - What it means and does not mean to be a World Heritage Site (no loss of sovereignty)
  - Assisting the State Party in the formulation of Tentative Lists by providing input on archaeological sites
  - Forming Friend’s Groups
But What Are We Supposed to Do?

More People and a Developed Structure will be needed

- International Scientific Committees are to do the much of the work of ICOMOS
  - Desk Audits of World Heritage List nominations
  - Site visits
  - Monitoring of site conditions, especially management
  - Participation in efforts to formulate and update standards
  - Providing expertise via a network of professionals
  - Reviews of development in terms of best practices
  - Establishing best practices for archaeological work around the world
We Need More Members and a Revised Structure

Roles and Responsibilities

Board of Registration

- Criteria for Expert Membership have been developed that apply to all scientific committees
- Board of Registration will develop criteria especially for ICAHM membership
ICAHM Expert Members must be recertified as such each three years by the Board of Registration. All Expert Members are required to be active members of ICAHM in order to be recertified, as demonstrated by:

1) maintaining membership in an ICOMOS national committee, and
2) participating in ICAHM programs and activities each calendar year in one of the following ways, and submitting a statement each year that describes the manner and outcome of participation:

- Holding elective or appointive office and carrying out responsibilities to the satisfaction of the President and ICAHM Executive
- Membership in a committee or sub-committee and satisfactorily carrying out tasks assigned by committee or sub-committee chairs,
- Oral presentations at ICAHM meetings
- Oral presentations to groups other than ICAHM to further the objectives of ICAHM
- Contributing to ICAHM publications by authoring or co-authoring articles, books, or other works
- Contributing to ICAHM publications by participating in editorial tasks
- Carrying out tasks assigned by the President
Communications Committee

- A Chair that will liaise with the ICAHM Executive to advise on content and, as relevant, the specific form that it should be given to content among media listed below. The Chair will also solicit content as directed by the Executive, as communicated by the President.

- The other three members will proactively recommend and solicit content and recommend form, but shall be primarily responsible for incorporating content and form in a timely way into the media below. These members will be responsible for, respectively:
  - The ICAHM website(s),
  - The section of the ICAHM website that shall serve as a listserv),
  - Occasional publications, and ICOMOS publications
- Will take over maintenance of new website (Google ICAHM)
- ICAHM Blog and Group under development

Economic Dimensions of Inscribing Archaeological Sites

BBL co-sponsored by the Cultural Heritage and Sustainable Tourism Thematic Group and the Local Economic Development Thematic Group at the Urban Anchor

Monday, September 28, 2009

Speaker
Professor Brent Lane, University of North Carolina’s Kenan-Flagler Business School

Chair
Stephen Karam, Lead Urban Economist, FEUUR

Since October 2008 Professor Brent Lane of the University of North Carolina’s Kenan-Flagler Business School has been working with the International Scientific Committee on Archaeological Heritage Management (ICAMM) on ways to better measure and enhance local economic impacts of World Heritage Sites (WHS). The outcome of this work will be applications of sustainable tourism and economic development practices that enhance the local economic potential of archaeological World Heritage Sites in targeted developing countries.
Economic Dimensions of Inscribing Archaeological Sites

- Examination of economic benefit of archaeological site preservation and designation of archaeological sites as World Heritage Sites (Brent Lane)
- Preliminary results suggest some points to include in archaeological heritage management best practices
Economic Dimensions of Inscribing Archaeological Sites

Industry Cluster Analysis for WHS

Cluster are trading networks of local and non-local business and employees

- Establishment level analysis reveals beneficiary demographics - employment, wages, ownership
- Captures pervasiveness of local economic benefits and extent of indigenous population participation
- Delineates areas of unrealized economic potential by segmenting “monolithic tourism industry construct”

Context for WHL Nominations: Poverty Point

Monumental structures built by non-agricultural societies
Sambuquis of Coastal Brazil
Along the coast of Brazil are sambuquis or shell mounds of varying size. They are not the result of sustained domestic activity. Their food remains strongly indicate a hunting and gathering economy focused on aquatic (lagoons, ocean) exploitation – fishing more than shellfish collection. And the sambuquis lack pottery. We now know that the largest of these (rising at least 50 m and covering hundreds of meters) served a mortuary function, involving highly ritualized interment ceremonies (including feasting) encompassing significant numbers of bodies. Their heyday was 2000-1 BC (thus, in the second millennium BC they were contemporary with Poverty Point, and somewhat earlier). The sambuquis correspond to “complex” hunters and gatherers – albeit without a formalized system of inequality. Moreover, the cultural similarity among sambuquis speaks to a strong, shared, widespread, and prolonged cultural pattern.

Marajó Island, Brazil
At the mouth of the Amazon River archaeologists have reconstructed even more notable evidence of complex society in the absence of agriculture, and with monumental constructions. New excavations on Marajó Island and revised interpretations of earlier work suggest that between 400 to 1350 AD Marajoara people built scores of mounds for habitation, feasting,
